“What Makes Me Tick, What Ticks Me Off”

Kay Potetz, PhD

Motivational Speaker & Management Consultant

Success and happiness depend on positively relating to others across a chasm of significant behavioral differences. Some things about people make us tick and others tick us off. Clearly, if you could figure out how to bridge the gap between yourself and others, you could make your own life... and theirs...much easier and more productive. Dr. Potetz's keen observations of people and quick wit will help you better understand the four different people styles and how to best deal with those that are unpleasant.

10:00 am – 10:30 am

Break in EXHIBIT HALL

10:30 am – 11:30 am

“Managing Multiple Generations”

Kathy Lechman

Leadership Trainer
OSU Leadership Center

Generation Y, those born between 1977 and 1997, are now entering a workforce where their leaders are primarily members of the baby-boomer generation. If today's workforce wants to benefit from the talents of Gen y now and in the future, leaders must be willing to gain a better understanding of the needs, desires, and preferences of this emerging generation. This session will explore the characteristics of each generation; describe and consider the workplace environment that each generation prefers; and compare the communication styles of each generation and identify strategies for effective communication in the workplace.
